

NOTES ON CONTRIBUTORS

Keiko HAMAGUCHI, Instructor of English at Tokushima Bunri University, received her BA (1976) and MA (1979) in English from Doshisha University. Her main interest is in Chaucer's fabliaux. Her MA thesis was entitled: "What Chaucer Did to Fabliaux: A Study of Chaucer's Miller's Tale."

Noboru IMAI received his BA (1981) and MA (1984) in English from Doshisha University. After a few years' teaching at a high school in Kobe, he is studying English at the Queen's College, City University of New York.

Tea YAMAMOTO, Part-time Instructor of English at Doshisha University, received her BA (1979) and MA (1981) from Doshisha. Mother of one daughter, she has been consistently and energetically pursuing the study of Virginia Woolf.

Keiji HORIKOSHI, system engineer working for IBM, received his BA (1982) and MA (1985) from Doshisha University. His enthusiasm for Graham Greene does not fade out, even though his current occupation is computer technology.

Noriko KATO, Part-time Instructor at Kyoto Junior College of Art, received her BA (1983) and MA (1985) in English from Doshisha University. Her main interest is in late nineteenth-century American literature. Her recent articles are "Maggie and the Flawed Marriages in The Golden Bowl," Doshisha Literature, No. 32 (1986) and "The Ambassadors ni okeru 'Shinjitsu' ni tsuite (A Study of 'Truth' in The Ambassadors)," Uryu, No. 10 (Kyoto Junior College of Art, 1987).

Keiko MISUGI received her BA (1984) in English from Kobe College, and MA (1986) in English from Doshisha University. A doctoral candidate at Doshisha, she is now studying at the State University of New York, Buffalo on a Rotary Scholarship. Her main interest is in twentieth-century American fiction.

Kaoru MINE is a poet who lives in Saga Prefecture. Born in Saga in 1926, he studied English literature at Doshisha University but was obliged to quit the university before graduation. Tetsuro CHIBA, Associate Professor at Doshisha, received his BA (1958) and MA (1961) in English from Doshisha University. He has been teaching primarily American literature at the Department of English, Doshisha University since 1964.

Kenji KITAO received his MA (1974) and PhD (1978) in TESL at the University of Kansas. He is an Associate Professor at Doshisha University and teaches English there. He is a member of various professional organizations in language teaching and communication. Dr. Kitao served as Vice-President of JALT from 1981 to 1984. He is a co-author of various TEFL textbooks published in Japan and the United States. S. Kathleen KITAO is a PhD candidate in communication at Michigan State University and will receive her doctorate in March 1988. Shinsuke YOSHIDA is a Lecturer at Poole Junior College. Haruyo YOSHIDA is a Part-time Instructor at Setsunan University. Kinji KAWAMURA is a Part-time Instructor at Kyoto Sangyo University. Makoto KURATA is a Lecturer at Kyoto University of Foreign Studies.