

NOTES ON CONTRIBUTORS

NOBUYOSHI SAITO obtained a M.A. (1978) in English from Doshisha University, and a M.A. (1982) and a PhD (1994) in English from Brown University. He has done his researches mainly in the field of English novels. His previous publications, mostly in English, include articles on Samuel Johnson, Sterne, Charlotte and Emily Brontë, Dickens, Hardy, Wilde, Lafcadio Hearn, Joyce, and Beckett.

AYAKO TSUZUKU received her M.A. (2016) in English Linguistics from Doshisha University. She is currently a Ph.D. candidate at Doshisha University and a part-time lecturer of English at Kinki University. Her research interest is the acquisition of English articles by foreign language learners. She gave presentations about The Relationship in Countability between English and Japanese Nouns at the Conference of the Japan Society of English Language Education (2018), and The Judgement on Countability of English and Japanese Nouns: A Study in terms of Multicompetence at the Conference of the English Literary Society of Doshisha University (2018).